1. The Stalin Works at Poznan will open a new department on 1 July 1951 for the production of heavy machine guns, antiaircraft machine guns, shell cases for artillery, and components for tanks. There will also be a test range for small caliber artillery weapons. The arms production branch and the range were set up by the Germans during the war, but have not been in use since the cessation of hostilities. The normal production of rolling stock is to be partially maintained.
